PREFACE.

IN presenting this work to the people of Pottawattamie County, we wish to make a few notes of explanation. In preparing the maps in this work, we had access to government and county records, private and public surveys, besides making personal examinations of every section in the county, and in many cases making individual surveys; notably in the case of the Missouri River, which, as is well known, has changed its course very materially from the line shown by the United States survey, cutting off large tracts in some cases and making land in others; and desiring that our atlas should be reliable in every particular, we surveyed the shore-line thereof, with instrument and chain, the whole length of its course bordering the county. The river-line as shown on the within plans indicates such survey. We have also indicated by dotted lines old surveys. We were also compelled to make many measurements in the vicinity of Council Bluffs and all the towns of the county. We have made every exertion possible to have everything reliable, having retraced all the streams and roads by following the ground.

We had hoped to secure the location of the new lines of railroad now proposed in the county; but the further delay of the work for that purpose would cause us great expense.

Our maps of the United States and the State of Iowa will be found to be the best published, and corrected to date.

Being requested by a number of parties to give them an opportunity of having illustrations of their residences and places of business in our atlas, we opened a department, although not intended at the start, for that purpose, making a uniform price-list, and giving all sections of the county an equal chance to be represented.

Therefore it will be seen that the representations in this department depended upon the patronage bestowed. Hundreds of these views are furnished to parties to send to all the older States and to the Old Country, which will go out as an advertisement of our improvements.

Our prospectus says nothing in regard to history matter. That has been so often attempted and proved unsatisfactory; but at the last moment we compiled and inserted a description of the county in order to call attention to some prominent facts, which is an advertisement simply, as many copies of this work will be sent to older States.

In the compilation of the entire work we have taken the greatest care, sparing no time nor expense; and if errors do occur, it will be from the many difficulties in the way of making a perfect work of this kind, and not from negligence. We have employed the best talent in all departments of the work besides taking our work for publication to the best lithographers and printers in the country, that nothing might be left undone to secure the object of the publishers to make this one of the best works of the kind published. We hope that our many patrons in the county will appreciate our efforts. We thank the county and city officials and the real estate agents for their assistance, as well as all our patrons throughout the county.

POTTAWATTAMIE COUNTY.

IOWA is interpreted to mean "This is the place." If this was true of Iowa in its native state, how much more true to-day. One cannot travel over its rolling prairies, or along its beautiful valleys, in elegant trains, over any of its many lines of railways, through its beautiful cities and towns; looking out upon its well cultivated farms, its cattle grazing upon its slopes; its fine farm houses and well-tilled bars with all the other evidences of prosperity; or the busy hum of its manufactures and evidences of trade and commerce, without exclaiming: "This is the place"; and, if he will investigate further, he will find that Iowa ranks first in the United States, in the production of Indian corn; first in production of oats per capita; second in production of hay per acre, and first in the production of all grains per capita. It ranks first in number of some, or 614,000, in number of cattle raised; first in amount of butter made in factories; and fourth in amount made on farms; although the wool clip is small, yet first in clip per sheep; sixth in production of coal; fourth in healthfulness; and, although a young State, only nine exceed it in manufactures.

It has no State debt; eighteen states exceed its rate of taxation. Only five states have more schools, and none better. In number of persons able to read and write, it stands first; in general intelligence and morality, it ranks high; surely "This is the place."

POTTAWATTAMIE COUNTY.

Pottawattamie County borders the Missouri River, in the third tier of counties from the south line of the state, occupying a position central in the most productive portion thereof. With the exception of Kosciusko it is the largest in the State, its being about 100 square miles, or 614,000 acres. Besides the Missouri River, it is drained by numerous small streams which traverse its surface from north to south with a slight westerly deflection.

The western portion of the county is a broad, level strip of territory, from three to ten miles wide, and known as the Missouri River Bottom. Bordering this, on the east, the range of bluffs rises steep and grand, in many places almost perpendicular, from two to three hundred feet in height. The range is partly by numerous narrow valleys and ravines, which descend from the adjacent uplands, but never loses its distinctive outlines. This remarkable range, rising abruptly from the sweeping plain, without a rock or stone upon its face, presents a view at once varied, grand and beautiful. The adjacent uplands are broken, and in many places too uneven for tillage; but are well adapted to grazing, and are frequently interspersed with thrifty groves of timber. Further east the broken outlines give place to a beautiful, undulating or waved surface, peculiar to the Western Slope, alternating with level valleys, from a half mile to a mile in width, bordering the streams. Everywhere there is a pleasing variety of scenery, enhanced in loveliness by a pure atmosphere and a constant succession of rich, mellow tints, which never fail to charm the eye with new and delightful forms and colors revealed by the perpetual play of light and shade upon the varied outlines.

The county is not abundantly supplied with timber, but there is enough, with proper economy in the use, to answer for all ordinary purposes. The largest bodies are the cottonwood groves along the Missouri, but there are also some excellent bodies, embracing different varieties, such as burr oak, black oak, red oak, walnut, white oak, red elm, ash, soft maple, linn, honey locust, hickory, &c., along the bluffs in the western part of the county, and on West Nishnabotna, Pigeon and Mosquito Creeks, while in every part of the county are to be found artificial groves of walnut, soft maple, box elder, poplar, cottonwood and catalpa trees, nearly every farm house having its wind break.

The soil is that of the well known bluff deposit, descending to a very great depth, and on the surface richly intermingled with vegetable mold. This entire deposit is strongly silicious, but everywhere finely pulverized and intermingled with a slight proportion of lime, sufficient to give it the remarkable consistency for which it is celebrated. It readily absorbs moisture, so that surplus water never remains upon its surface, and its great depth enables it to retain enough to supply vegetation in case of a long absence of rain. It therefore rarely suffers from extremes of drought or rain. This character holds on the uplands and in the valleys. This peculiar soil seems to be equally well adapted to the production of wheat, corn and grass, a combination which is extremely rare. It lies within the great wheat belt, which here defers down the Missouri river, occupying the belt noted for the highest production of corn. The other cereals do equally well here. Wild grasses grow luxuriantly, and tame grasses thrive, and the soil is well adapted to vegetables and fruit.

There are exposures of limestone in several places in the southeast part of the county. On West Nishnabotna limestone suitable for building purposes is found. North of Council Bluffs, on Mosquito Creek, and along the Missouri river are also exposures of limestone. At various places along the base of the Missouri bluffs are masses of a coarse quality of sandstone and conglomerate, formed by the percolation of lime water through beds of sand and pebbles belonging to the drift deposit, but this deposit is practically worthless. It is not a stratified rock, and the cementing process usually extends only a few feet inward from the surface.

Good brick is manufactured at Council Bluffs, and materials for the purpose exist in other parts of the county.

The climate of the Missouri slope is salubrious and bracing, and in consequence of this fact, many persons have located in the city of Council Bluffs and the County of Pottawattamie. At one time the idea prevailed that much of the Missouri River bottom would prove too wet for agricultural purposes, but this idea has long since been dispelled, for these lands are of the very richest in the county, and yield the most abundant corn, grass and other crops. Here cattle and stock growers find the very richest spots on earth for their business. The luxuriant growth of grass on these bottom lands causes cattle men to drive their stock for many miles for the feed that is to be found from early spring till late fall. The grounds of feed are fed and fattened here for the market with but very little other feed than the grass they find upon this land. Often cattle are driven from these pastures directly to the slaughter house, where they are killed for the market.

Nearly every acre of this bottom land is susceptible of excellent drainage, and when reduced to cultivation, it presents a moist, loamy surface, easy of tillage and is unsurpassed for productive qualities. The uplands are also rich, and the best of health prevails among the settlers. All the climatic conditions of this county are such as to attract special attention from persons who are actually weak or debilitated. Here many have gone out upon these prairies, and have become strong and healthy, and are now among the most prosperous people of the county. Persons seeking homes for health and free soil, have found them in Pottawattamie County, Iowa, and with few exceptions, are satisfied to remain.

The corn crop of 1884 in this county was greater than that of any county in the United States. This, taken in connection with the great amount of wheat and other grain raised, the amount of hay put up, the amount of butter made, both on farms and in creameries, the thousands of hogs and cattle shipped from the county, show a wonderful development; yet when we think of the undeveloped resources we can not estimate the possibilities of the future.

Pottawattamie is becoming noted as a fruit-growing county. In the western and older portions of the east end, are many fine bearing orchards, and in fact nearly every farm in the county has its orchard, either bearing or growing. The quality of the fruit is excellent.

Besides apples, pears, cherries, strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, currants and other fruits are produced in great abundance, especially at Council Bluffs, where also the bluffs soil produces the fine grapes. Vineyards may be seen in every direction on the slopes and hill sides, interspersed with the fine gardens, which are often noted by strangers, producing vegetables for the markets. In fact everything that grows in our latitude, can be produced in the limits of Pottawattamie County.

The public schools are in a flourishing condition. The county is also supplied with churches of all denominations. Out of many of the fine school buildings and churches appear in our work, which we think makes a showing equal to any county in the State.

In 1840, when Lewis and Clarke were holding their first council with red men of the forest, no such grand things as have occurred could have been hoped for this country. But the time has arrived when everything can be hoped and looked for, and many things not now expected will be seen. The day for doubting the healthfulness, the productiveness and prosperity of this large and extensive county has passed. No one any longer seems to have fears or doubts as to the future greatness and growth of Pottawattamie, for the future are inevitable, and her increase and prosperity only depend upon climate. Climate, water, soil, a navigable river and railroads all combine to complete the grandeur long since begun.

HISTORY.

In the Summer of 1804, the celebrated explorers, Lewis and Clarke, on their way up the Missouri River, held a council with the Indians at the place where Fort Calhoun was subsequently established, on the Nebraska side of the river, about twenty miles above the present city of Council Bluffs. From this circumstance they gave to that place the name of "Council Bluffs." As early as 1821, a French trader named Hart, had established a trading house on the bluffs just above the large spring, now known as the "Myerster Spring," within the limits of the present city of Council Bluffs. At this time the American Fur Company had established various trading posts in the great Northwest, and this point was known to their employees who ascended the river as Lacote de Hart, or Hart's Bluff. At that time the Missouri River was navigated by a few traders and persons belonging to the Fur Company, having their headquarters at St. Louis, and only with small keel boats propelled by hand. In 1827, Francis Guitier, a Frenchman in the employ of the American Fur Company, encamped with others in the timber at the foot of the bluffs where now Broadway with its double row of magnificent business blocks is located.

In the Summer of 1838, Davis Hardin and family, including his wife and seven children, landed in the county, at the point then known as Council Point, about four miles below the present City of Council Bluffs. Mr. Hardin had been appointed to act as government farmer among the Pottawattamie Indians, who were then about to be removed from the Plate Purchase in Missouri to Iowa. A few months after, the Indians were brought up, and Mr. Hardin then removed to where he opened a farm on a little stream known as Indian Creek, now in the business portion of the city. His sons were John, Allen, Richard and Martin D. Hardin, and became permanent settlers, remaining here throughout the time when the region was under Mormon control. When the Pottawattamie Indians were brought up, a number of white persons came also, including traders, agents, and other government employees.

In 1839, two companies of troops came up and built a block house, or sort of fort, on the bluff in the east part of what is now the city, and shortly after, a Catholic Mission was established here, under the charge of Fathers De Smith and Veight. They built a dwelling house and used the block-house for religious services. No white persons came as settlers, except those among the Indians as traders and agents in various capacities, or those connected with the military or missions, until the Mormons came in 1846. The Indians remained until 1846-7, when by the treaty of June 5, 1846, they relinquished this territory and removed to Kansas.

Their departure made way for the advent of the followers of Joseph Smith, who, after the death of the prophet, at Nauvoo, in 1844, turned their faces westward. Brigham Young, with the head men of the church, halted for the winter of 1846-7, at a place called Winter-quarters, near Florence, Nebraska. In the Spring he departed on his journey with a portion of the colony, but the greater part returned to the Iowa side mainly within the limits of Pottawattamie County, where others had arrived in the Spring of 1846, in season to plant and secure a crop. The center of this community was established on Indian Creek in the vicinity of the old fort, at a place first called Miller's Hollow, and afterwards by them named Kanessville, but their settlement spread rapidly over the county and into some of the adjoining counties wherever groves of timber and water afforded an available location. Over this community Orson Hyde, priest, writer, editor, and lawyer was installed as the president of the church of twelve, and the country remained under their exclusive control for several years. In 1850, they raised a battalion 500 strong for the Mexican War under Colonel Clark which, after traversing Northern Mexico, and taking part in the battles there, closed its campaign in California. It is claimed that the gold in the Sacramento was first discovered by this battalion. Here many of them remained and engaged in mining. The Mormon population was probably most numerous in 1848, but in 1849 many had left to Utah numbered 6,552, and in 1850, 1,278, but they were not all within the present limits of the county. Many followed Brigham Young previous to 1842, when finally the word went round that all true believers should gather together at Salt Lake. The Gentiles now swarmed into Kanessville and all the surrounding country. Farms were sold to them, lots, cabins and stores were burned off, all at a ruinous sacrifice, and the emigration went forward and continued with diminishing volume during the several succeeding years until all who were willing to acknowledge Brigham as their leader and the true successor of the prophet had left the country. A remnant, however, remained, some of whom adhering the Mormon faith, and others falling around the standards of Joseph Smith, who, as believed the emigration of Polygamy.

In 1849, the unexampled run of emigration to the California gold mines commenced. Kanessville lay directly in its route, and soon became a general rendezvous and starting point for all who crossed the State of Iowa as the last settlement here they set out upon the plains.

The county was organized Sept. 21, 1848. The first county commissioners were A. H. Perkins, David D. Yensurley, and George D. Coulton, and they held their first session at the house of Hiram Clark in Kanessville. T. Burdick was their clerk; he was also first county judge, elected in 1851; James Sloan was elected district judge, and held his first term in the county, May 5th, 1851. Evan M. Green was Clerk, and Alexander McLean, Sheriff. At this term Orson Hyde was admitted to the bar. Sloan was appointed by the Governor; he was a native of Ireland, and many anecdotes are told of his wit and eccentricity on the bench. He resigned in the course of a year, and was succeeded by Judge Bradford. These officials were all Mormons.

THE FIRST GENTILES.

In June, 1848, a store was established on the present site of Council Bluffs, a point then known as Miller's Hollow before it was named Kanessville. The business was opened in the name of Soutman & McDonald, and was carried on by Mr. Soutman. Mr. Jonathan B. Soutman was the first Gentile who settled among the Mormons. He soon after married and remained a prominent resident of the place. His business was carried on for some time in a log building. He subsequently built the first frame store, and also the first frame dwelling house in Council Bluffs. The next Gentile settler was Mr. Cornelius Voorhis, who arrived on the 17th of August, 1848. The third was Wm. R. Ferguson, of St. Louis.

The various settlements scattered about the county included one at short distance east of Kanessville, on Mosquito Creek, near the seat of Wick's old Indian Mill, where Wm. Garner, Ezra Scofield, Simon Graybill, Alexander Follett and Alexander Marshall remained after the exodus; another on Pigeon Creek, in the northern part of the county; another on the Nishnabotna at a place afterwards called Macedonia, where Peter Hans and W. never built a mill, and another in the northwestern part of the county in and about Lewis's Grove, where the first settlers were Captain Josiah Headie, Wm. Henderson and John Kritzinger, the latter of whom built a mill.

In the Summer of 1850 Joseph Toole came up from St. Joseph, Mo., and established the celebrated outfitting house for California emigrants, known as the Elephant Store, and J. A. Jackson became connected with the house in 1851. The trade of the place was also increased in 1850 by the accession of W. D. Turner, S. H. Kiddle and J. J. Foreman. Dr. B. Y. Shelly commenced the practice of medicine here the same year, and Dr. S. E. Williams, then a medical student, arrived in the Fall. Dr. P. J. McMahon came in 1851, so also did B. R. Pegram, A. S. Bryant and the Robinson Brothers. The immigration that came in 1852 to take the place of the Mormons was numerous. Early that Spring Mr. Samuel Baylis purchased of Henry Miller his tract in the valley of Indian Creek. The deed was signed by Orson Hyde, and commenced, "Jesus Christ and the Church of Latter-day Saints sell to Mr. Samuel Baylis," etc. The title has never been disputed.

The public lands of Pottawattamie County were surveyed during the years 1851-2, and the United States land office was located at Council Bluffs early in the Spring of 1853, with Joseph H. D. Street, Register, and Dr. S. M. Ballard, Receiver. The first entry was made by Joseph D. Lane.

COUNCIL BLUFFS.

This city has a pleasant location at the foot of the bluffs in an arm of the Missouri River valley running up between the hills, and extending out over the beautiful valley towards the river some three miles distant. On the slopes and summits are many fine residences, with room for many more, overlooking an enchanting view for many miles up and down the river and across on the hills of the Nebraska side, where the City of Omaha rises on the opposite slope.

The City of Council Bluffs is the most important railroad center on the Missouri River. It is therefore, a commercial point of much importance. It is the terminus of the Union Pacific R.R., as well as of the C. & Q.; C. R. I. & P. C. M. & St. P., Chicago & N. W., K. C. St. J. & C. B. S. C. & P., and the W. St. L. & P. R. R.'s. All trains on these roads arrive at and depart from the U. P. depot; there being upwards of twenty trains per day each way. Connection is also made with Omaha roads by dummy trains. The freight handled is enormous. Two more railways will in all probability enter the city within the next year.

Council Bluffs commands a large trade, both wholesale and retail, which is increasing very rapidly. There are several very large warehouses, or branches of large manufacturing establishments, especially of agricultural implements, the trade in which has reached large proportions.

There are five banks operated in the city. The hotels compare with any city of its size. A line of street cars traverses Broadway, Main and Pearl to the local depots, also to Union depot. A dummy train runs to Omaha and returns every hour. The hauling stores are lighted by electric lights, and a movement is on foot to light the streets in the same way, although they are now lighted by gas as well as most cities.

The city is supplied by water from the Missouri River by the best system of water works to be found in the west, combining two complete systems, a direct pressure, and a reservoir system, which in connection with the excellent fire department renders the city a first-class fire protection.

The city has a first-class telephone exchange which is connected with all the important towns in a radius of seventy-five miles.

There are published four daily newspapers, two morning and two evening; also, five weekly papers.

The public schools are second to none in the State. There are a number of very fine school buildings. The Blomster, Pierce Street, and High School buildings are a source of pride to its citizens.

The State Deaf and Dumb Institute is near the city with its several hundred pupils, the buildings making an imposing appearance. Among the fine buildings of the city, of which there are a number, is the United States Court House, and Post Office, the Masonic Temple, and Bohan's Open House. A new County Court House will be built the coming season. As Pottawattamie is one of the wealthiest counties in the State, no doubt it will build one that will be a credit to her citizens. The business blocks will compare favorably with any city in the State. The new Presbyterian Church is a handsome structure, and with the Episcopal and Catholic Churches now in process of construction will make one of the finest church architecture that any city might be proud of. The M. F. Society will build a fine church soon. Nearly all the religious denominations are represented in the city by church buildings.

Council Bluffs is famous for its picturesque residence sites; the many glens and hill sides affording fine opportunities for landscape gardening, which has been much improved. Oakland Park, and Glen Avenues, and Frank Street are among the finest in the bluffly part; while in the vicinity of Baylis Park, extending over the level portion some distance west, also along the foot of the main bluff, are many very fine residences.
